CLEARPATH ADDS FORMER DOE, CEQ OFFICIALS TO ADVISORY BOARD

ClearPath has added a trio of former senior Department of Energy and White House Council on Environmental Quality officials to its advisory board.

William Martin was deputy secretary of energy during the Reagan administration, as well as executive secretary of the U.S. National Security Council and special assistant to President Ronald Reagan. He was later chairman of DOE's Nuclear Energy Advisory Committee for a decade under both Presidents George W. Bush and Barack Obama. Martin's extensive background also includes as special assistant to the executive director of the International Energy Agency, executive director of the Republican Platform Committee for President George H.W. Bush and president of the Council of the United Nations' University for Peace.

Elizabeth Stolpe was associate director at CEQ under President George W. Bush, leading development and implementation of President Bush's market-based national air quality initiatives and regulatory activity at the Environmental Protection Agency. She later joined Royal Dutch Shell, where she served as advisor to the head of Shell's downstream business in London and led external affairs and business planning for Shell's Arctic venture. She started her career handling environmental, energy and natural resource policy for her home-state Sen. Frank Murkowski (R-Alaska).

Marty Hall is former chief of staff at CEQ under President George W. Bush, lead White House liaison to the U.S. Senate during consideration of comprehensive 2007 energy legislation and deputy staff director for the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. Hall was also a senior policy advisor and communications director for the Senate panel. A former college football player for the Northwestern Wildcats, Hall was most recently senior vice president and chief of staff at Business Roundtable after previously serving as vice president for energy policy and federal affairs at FirstEnergy Corporation.

“Bill, Elizabeth and Marty bring immense insight to our efforts to address climate change in a way that is pragmatic and fully utilizes the full range of federal tools to facilitate clean, reliable and affordable technologies,” ClearPath Executive Director Rich Powell said. “Their deep resumes are also perfect complements to our vision of helping forge efforts that eschew top-down regulatory approaches in favor of collaborative efforts to spur U.S.-led innovation involving both government and the private sector.”
