ClearPath Managing Policy Director Appointed to Department of Commerce Advisory Committee

Washington, DC – Thursday, May 6, 2021 – ClearPath is pleased to congratulate Jeremy Harrell for being appointed to the U.S. Department of Commerce’s Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency Advisory Committee (REEEAC).

REEEAC, which sits as an advisory body under the International Trade Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce, advises the Secretary of Commerce, Gina Raimondo, regarding the development and administration of programs and policies to expand the competitiveness of U.S. exports of renewable energy and energy efficiency goods and services.

“We are incredibly excited for Jeremy to have a seat at the table representing ClearPath and American manufacturing and service companies in the clean energy sector,” said Rich Powell, Executive Director of ClearPath. “ClearPath works to develop and advance policies that bolster American competitiveness by ensuring the technologies invented in America can be built here and exported globally, and we value the opportunity to engage with the Executive Branch on these important issues.”

Jeremy is the Managing Director of Policy at ClearPath, where he leads public policy development and promotion efforts. He specializes in clean energy innovation, financing policies, and regulatory reforms that accelerate the development and export of cutting-edge technologies.

He has also played a leadership role in multiple clean energy industry trade groups. He is the Chairman of the U.S. Nuclear Industry Council, a leading advocate for advanced nuclear energy and promotion of the American supply chain globally, and he leads the legislative efforts for Geothermal Rising, the largest association for geothermal energy professionals.

Prior to ClearPath, Jeremy advised Congressional leaders, across multiple roles in the House and Senate, on energy, environmental, national security, tax, and transportation policy for a decade.
